Local Elder Law Firm Launches Professional Education Website

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Hendersonville, TN—September 18, 2006: The Elder Law Practice of Timothy L. Takacs is announcing the launch of ElderLawEducation.com, an elder law resource center for professionals who work with elderly, disabled and chronically-ill clients.

“Aging, chronic illness and disability raise tough questions for families and the professionals who serve them,” said Timothy L. Takacs, a Hendersonville-based Certified Elder Law Attorney whose multi-disciplinary practice helps clients and their families respond to the legal, financial, physical and psychological challenges presented by long life, illness and disability. “Our professional education website is designed to help attorneys, social workers, health care personnel, case managers, long-term care facility administrators and others develop a deeper understanding of elder law.”

According to Takacs, changing demographics helped spark the development of the new website. “With 80 million Baby Boomers moving into their golden years and one person reaching age 50 every seven seconds, there is a great demand for information, especially from professionals,” he said.

Professionals can view the new website at <http://www.ElderLawEducation.com>. Families looking for elder law information can visit Elder Law Practice’s primary website at <http://www.tn-elderlaw.com>. For more information, call (615) 824-2571.
